Another Rebel View of "Sherman's Di-

The rebel press, from one end of the South to the other, are in ecstasies of hope over the prospective schievements of Hood. They agnounce that he is in Sherman's rear, and that he must be used up in a few weeks. The Bichmond Whig confesses power, and no mode of treatment over afforded such that Hood's army is "in a very critical position," but thinks Sherman's destruction

The Whig indulges in the following fic-

He is at and around Atlants at the pres ent moment. He is supplied from Chat-tanooga, considerably more than one hundred miles off. The supplies come by a single railroad track which crosses the hatahoochse considerably to the north of Atlants. The intermediate country be-tween Atlants and Chattanoogs is desclate rendered so by Sherman's own bar-barous policy. He must get everything he consumes, then, from Chattanooga. His army is certainly not more than fifty thou-sand strong. We doubt, indeed, whether it numbers so many, but that is the out-side. He has large stores at Atlanta, but fifty thousand troops will soon consume everything there. Hood, with an army ally able to meet him in a pitched battle with every hope and success, is on this railroad line. He is thus completely cut off from his base of supply. He must clear his rear, or advance farther into Georgia. In the first case he must beat Hood. In the second he must march with Hood in his rear. In either his position is very mirical. In either it would take but a verpartial success on our part to render it fa tal. He must attack Hood in his intrench-ments, and he must best him badly and

If Hood were in Sherman's rear, on the ne of reilroad to Chattanooga, and in a solated country, it is a question which very Yankee naturally asks, Where are is supplies to come from while he is squatting in the rear of Atlanta? Will he feed on unsubstantial sir? Such driveling nonsense are the rebels in Georgia now fed upon. But the Disputch carries the dilemm nto other details. If Sherman cannot get id of Hood in his rear, what then can he o? asks the Disputch. Two things renain for him to do-either to march on Montgomery and Mobile, or upon Augusta and Savannah. In either event, the Dispatch thus predicts his "sad fortunes"; An advance in the direction of either Mobile or Augusts would be the signal for all the country over which he has passed to rise in his rear. The army of Hood, in that case, would serve as a nucleus around which the whole strength of northern Georgia would rally. Followed closely in the rear by Hood, he would be assaited in flank and front by every man or boy who ould carry a gun or mount a horse. Arrived before Augusta or Mobile he would continues, Senital Debitty and frritability, Important in a force in his front prepared to resist bim, and he would find flood and his other dility, &c., &c., all of which arise principalty from friends still in his rear. To fall back, on se other hand in the direction of his a plies, would be equally hazardous. He would, in that case, be compelled to fight Hood intrenched up to his chin, or to get may deliars. round him by flanking. In the meantime forrest is between Hood and Nashville breaking up the railroads and destroying the communications of every kind. Should be pass Hood by flanking, he will still find it defficult to subsist an army in a country ndered so desolate as that of North Georgia. His only hope, it seems to us, would lie in reinforcements to come through Nashville from beyonnd the Ohio, and hey would have to run the gauntlet of Forrest and the guerilles. In fine, we can hardly conceive a case in which Shorman DR. B. ANDERS & CO'S IODINE will not be reduced to extreme difficulty if the proper vigilance be used and the proper men hold the command. All this, no doubt, sounds very comfort ing to the desponding rebels in Georgia.

But it is all based upon several delusions. ear of Sherman; the second, that he has could get into his rear, he could support his army; the fourth is, that the Union in government paper. army is not in Tennessee; the fifth is, that Hood's ragamuffins could meet Sherman's legions in the open field.

We opine that Sherman is anxious for nothing so much as to have the rebel army in his rear. Once there, he would soon use them up as he did at Altoons.
